It was the work these men were doing how-ver which was of chief interest. Nearby was a large establishment where the Garmans were seen at work. The great warehouse was fairly abor with these workmen, their material put aside for a rough working house. Fig wheels were turning and hydraulic presses were turning and hydraulic presses were turning to shipping Eight big Gormans were on top of a flotter ranging the balls.

At the little town of Author is dozent Germans in bloodes were running a steam threshing machine. The grain was failing in a steady stream as the definance boxed the sheaves from the later house and ran it through the store house and ran it through the machine (others were running the machine others were relining an steam engine or steadying the movement of the long shafts leading to the threshing of the wheat yield, now Reing on all over France, Germana, being scattered through all the little farming centers doing the heavy work

Like Athletes on Field. At Mantefacon 1,100 Germans were the courtyard of a substantial in the courtyary of a substantial building formerly used as a convent. It was their hear of leiture, and they stood about in aroups like athlets on a big spiriting field. The French mult wagon had just arrived bringing the letters and backages coming within the regulations. The soldiers can send two letters a month and a postal card weekly, the letters being of four pures, extreen lines to the page, dealing only with health conditions and personal affairs, but not of the war. There is the same facility for incoming mail, and the men were exactly awaiting the parcels and letters.

German Poles were seen in large numbers at one of the village cu-cumpments. They were not an stordy a set as the men from western and a set as the men from Western and southern Germany; Bregular of build and many small men. Some were well along to recovery from wounds, but still had bendaged heads or arms. One Pole had the whole sole of his law slashed off by a suber alroke, but the wound had healed and he stood among his fellows with his narrow face tapering down to an acute point. Two young German Poles stepped forward and showed the Polish spirit underlying German domination, by recitiging German domination, by recit-ing the cvib of German rule. They stocks simply and extrestly, maintain-ing that the Poles fared much worse, under German rule than they did
